What is Fairtrade?

Millions of farmers depend on selling their crops to survive, but when prices drop it can spell disaster. If farmers earn less than it costs to run their farm, they face real hardship.

Fairtrade makes sure that farmers and producer organisations get a fair and stable price for their products to help them support their families and invest in a better future.

Producer Standards

These are international standards to ensure that Fairtrade producers in developing countries can improve their lives and their communities. Fairtrade farmers:

- Are paid a fair price that allows them to provide for their families;
- Join together in organisations, such as co-operatives, which can make them stronger as a group and help them get a better price for their products;
- Farmers and plantation workers receive an extra Fairtrade 'premium' to spend on community projects such as schools, hospitals and clean water, and farmers can also put it back into their businesses to help them grow
- Workers on plantations have safe and healthy working conditions, the freedom to join a union to protect their rights, and child labour is not permitted
- The natural environment is protected by reducing the amount of chemicals used, conserving water and producing less waste.
